Between 28 March and 1 April 1955, practice flights were daily made by jet fighters which flew individually in elements of two. The aircraft were not MiG-15s or La-17s, but a type which had swept-back wings and slightly rounded upper section of the tail.

Comment. The correctness of the information is doubted. Around the same time, a similar MiG aircraft with curved rudder assembly was observed at Neuruppin airfield. It is possible that there is a connection between both reports.
